RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

University of Notre Dame Notre Dame, IN
Doctoral Researcher August 2022 - present
Established and implemented several methods to mitigate the impact of device variations on inference of NVCIM accelerators. Achieved high robust and efficient algorithms for NVCIM training and deployment.

AI Chip Center for Emerging Smart Systems(ACCESS) Hong Kong
Visiting student May 2024 - July 2024
Developed and implemented a fully quantized 1D convolutional system for ventricular arrhythmia detection on a CNN accelerator (40nm, TSMC). Led the full-stack design, from UI to backend, achieving low inference latency and high energy efficiency.

Huazhong University of Science and Technology Wuhan, Hubei
Master's Researcher, Research Assistant August 2018 - June 2022
Designed low-bit quantized CNNs for RRAM accelerators, addressing non-idealities of RRAM crossbars during inference. Developed a novel binary neural network RRAM accelerator with half area and maintained high accuracy.
